What’s it about?

“This study affirmed the ways in which culture and worldviews shaped the identity of Maori leaders, confirming that relational leadership is a process of social construction, which emerges from the dynamic interaction between ontology (ways of being) and praxis (ways of doing)”